Arizona Pipe Trades brings out its volunteers for “action-packed” day of campaign activities

Sept. 21, 2010 – PHOENIX The Arizona Pipe Trades Local 469 held its largest 2010 election-season volunteer day on Saturday, Sept. 11, 2010. The 469 “Big” Day of Action brought together dozens of Arizona Pipe Trades members and their families to support the organization’s endorsed candidates, including Terry Goddard (governor), Felicia Rotellini (Arizona attorney general), Rodney Glassman (United States Senate), Jon Hulburd (United States Congress-District Three) and Gary Pierce (Arizona Corporation Commission).

After an energetic kick-off at Local 469’s headquarters in central Phoenix led by Arizona Pipe Trades Business Manager Phil McNally, Rotellini and Glassman, approximately 100 volunteers covered 30 square miles of the Phoenix metro area, posting almost 200 campaign signs and sharing information door to door with about 1,000 households.

“The Arizona Pipe Trades works closely with legislative, statewide and federal elected officials to address our organization’s public policy plans and goals,” says Phil McNally, Local 469 business manager. “One way we do this is by getting to know the candidates during election season, and endorsing and assisting those who share our issues and concerns. As an organization, we are extremely proud of our track record so far this election season – about 1,500 volunteers hours logged, 4,000 phone calls, 1,000 households visited, and 500 signs placed, just to mention a few of our activities.”
